Alki's Accessibility Matters Issue is available on March 31st!

Alki: The Washington Library Association Journal has moved to a new site! Visit Alki.pubpub.org on March 31st to read our newest issue on accessibility.

Read about Kate Sudan-Roche's experience with protesting on campus while using a mobility aid. Follow along with Colin Manikoth's 3-step starter guide on ensuring your website is up to snuff. Consider the benefits of proactive accessibility compared to reactive accommodation with Alex Byrne. Then, let Amy Potter bring your attention to the needs of neurodivergent people. This issue is packed with the insights and personal experiences of 16 unique authors whose perspectives help shed light on the dark corners of such an important discussion in Washington libraries: accessibility. Come take part in the conversation!
