From Meg Beade: "As an information school student interested in youth services, I found the session on Guerrilla Storytime extremely useful! I probably gathered at least 4 or 5 storytime songs to add to my collection as well as suggestions I may use during my internship this summer."

From Kendra Jones: "The session on The Adolescent Brain broadened my understanding of how teens work and armed me with some tools and tricks to help me be more successful in my interactions with teens. Be aware of your face-it might appear to teens to be angry when that isn't your intention."

4. 2014 Evergreen Young Adult Book Award and Changes for 2015

The Washington Young Adult Review Group (WashYARG) is excited to announce Divergent by Veronica Roth as the winner of the 2014 Evergreen Young Adult Book Award. Although a few other titles received their fair share of votes, Divergent was the clear favorite of Washington teens (earning 45% of the votes). Thank you so much to everyone who promoted the contest, encouraged teens to read the nominated titles and participated in voting.

In 2015 we are officially changing our name to the Evergreen Teen Book Award. We hope this will simplify promotions and more obviously indicate our target voting group. After much reading and deliberating by the committee, the 2015 Evergreen Teen Book Award nominees are:

Please encourage your teens to read as many of the nominees as possible in the coming months. To vote for their favorite in March 2015, teens need to have read at least two from the list. More information including book talks, promotional flyers, and ballots will be available soon at our website www.evergreenbookaward.org. You can also find us on Facebook!

We would love to increase participation in voting. If you have any stories to share about how you use the Evergreen Award nominees with your teens, please send them to kirsten.gunn@highlineschools.org. We will work to share these ideas throughout the year at our website.

Finally, the Evergreen committee is also looking for titles to consider for the 2016 nominee list. We would love to hear from you and your teens about any books (fiction, non-fiction, manga, graphic novels) you loved that were published in 2013. Please send the titles of suggested books to kirsten.gunn@highlineschools.org.
