Create Your Own National Book Festival!

Do you want to bring the National Book Festival to your branch? Consider submitting a program idea. The deadline to submit has been extended to Aug. 25!

As a state affiliate of the Library of Congress Center for the Book, the Washington Center for the Book has access to a list of participating authors that is not yet public. This list can be used, for planning purposes only, by libraries who would like to plan NBF programming in their branches. Events might include watch parties, community conversations, story walks, poetry slams, book club meetings, and more.

If you are interested in hosting an NBF program at your branch, please email Sara Peté, sara.pete@sos.wa.gov, and Linda Johns, linda.johns@spl.org, co-managers of the Washington Center for the Book to get access to the list of authors and to discuss your program idea.

TRANSFORMING TEEN SERVICES TRAIN THE TRAINER

Applications Open for Transforming Teen Services Cohort

Applications are now being accepted for Washington State Library's second cohort of Transforming Teen Services. The cohort runs Sept-Nov 2021. Applications are due Aug. 12.

The 12-week facilitated curriculum consisting of both synchronous and asynchronous work. Each week, there will be independent, self-guided work in addition to synchronous meetings each Thursday from 3-4 p.m. Participants will build skills in facilitating learning and gain an understanding of topics related to equity in teen services.

This course is mostly taught from a public library perspective, but those who could benefit from a deeper dive into serving teens, such as school library staff, are encouraged and welcome to apply. For more information, contact Sara White.

This grant is supported by funding provided by the federal Institute of Museum and Library Services administered by the Library Services and Technology Act, through the Washington State Library, a division of the Office of the Secretary of State.
