Alki Call for Papers

Critical Conversations: The Conference Issue

Attending the annual meeting of the Washington Library Association? Consider sharing your experiences with the community and writing for Alki! Did a presentation or a keynote spark a new project or connect with work you are already doing? Are there talks you attended that your colleagues need to know about?

This issue is traditionally the Conference Issue, and we're asking you to engage — critically — with the theme of the WLA annual meeting: "Communities, Conversations, Connections." Questions to consider include:

- How can or do library associations promote critical conversations among individual library staff and library organizations?
- What do you think is a library association's role in defining library values?
- What are the critical conversations that your libraries are having?

This journal is by and for members of the Washington State library community (including students) and is meant to reflect your experiences. As always, we are happy to consider articles that are not related to the theme but are of interest to the WLA community. Please send your article to alkieditor@wla.org and include:

- Your name and contact information
- A brief, third-person bio that includes your affiliation and job title, if applicable
- Any graphics (logos, photos, charts, etc.) in .jpg or .png format
- A working title
- Word count
- The article as a word document or google document. Please follow this template.

Johanna Jacobsen Kiciman, the editor of Alki, is happy to discuss ideas and expectations with you as well. For inspiration, check out some of our past issues!

Advocacy Corner | EDI Advocacy...101?

If you attend the WLA Conference this year, you may notice a session called "EDI Advocacy 101." What does it mean to advocate for equity, diversity, and inclusion in our libraries? How do we make that happen? How do we make it more than buzzwords and an acronym?

The panelists for the session will have more to share about their experience with those questions. And that really is the point, isn't it? Listening to someone else describe their experience, or speaking up for my own. Each of us experiences the world according to all the things we were raised to take for granted about who people are and how they should be. But what if the things I take for granted are not the only way? What if someone assumes that my world must be just like theirs — or that my world doesn't matter (or that I shouldn't exist)?

In libraries, we turn to information and stories to educate our understanding and expand our imagination. So we advocate for access, and we advocate for collections that represent not only the widest range of ideas but the widest range of authentic experiences and identities. We advocate for diversity in hiring and equity in organizational culture. We pay attention to who we're including, and who we're leaving out, in all our words and work. We talk with our elected representatives and our boards and our communities and our bosses and our co-workers about how our libraries can re-examine our assumptions, and make the most inclusive welcome to, you know, everybody. That's how we make a start with EDI Advocacy...101.

Survey: "What Kind of 'CRAAP' Do They Teach in High School?"

Consider participating in the following information literacy practices survey created by librarians at Bellevue College.

With the help of participants, the survey organizers hope to identify what (if any) types of source evaluation (CRAAP, SIFT, lateral reading, etc.) are being taught in Washington state middle schools and high schools. The results of this survey will allow them to determine how best to incorporate source evaluation and information literacy practices into our work, and create continuity in learning for our students.

Take the survey now. The survey will take approximately 15 minutes to complete. Participants who wish to remain anonymous can opt out of both including an email and providing any additional resources at the end of the survey.

Emails provided will be used to alert participants of survey progress and results, and may be added to a directory of library professionals in the state for future collaborations. Emails/personal information will be removed from the raw data, and will NOT be used for publication purposes or presentations.

The survey will be open until Nov. 1, 2021. The results of this survey will be analyzed and shared as a final report, and may be used in future presentations or publications.

If you have questions or wish to follow up with us on this project, please contact Elena Maans-Lorincz at e.maans@bellevuecollege.edu.

The Learning Curve

Niche Academy: "Soft Skills: The Tools Every Librarian Should Have"

Join presenter Melissa Lockaby today, Sept. 15 at 11 a.m. PT for a free virtual webinar on soft skills that aren't covered in a classroom, why they are important, and how they can make you a better librarian. Register now.

Being a successful librarian means more than knowing how to catalog, read a MARC record, or find resources for a student writing a paper. It means having soft skills that fill in gaps when theory and technical knowledge don't answer patron questions or tell you how to be a team player.

Those interested, but not able to attend the live webinar, may register to receive the recording afterward. For more information, contact Julie Edwards.

ALA: "Accessible Music Library Instruction for the Visually Impaired"

In this workshop today, Sept. 15 from 11:30 a.m.-1 p.m. PT, musician and accessibility expert Christina Ebersohl will introduce the basic history of visual accessibility for music materials and show how to adapt teaching practices — online and in-person — as well as policies for learners of all visual ability. Register now. Cost is $71.10 for ALA members and $79 for non-members.

Library staff involved in music materials/library instruction will find this workshop especially relevant. Participants will explore adaptations during class and will be guided through resources to improve their advocacy and implementation of visual accessibility for the studio, classroom, or institution.
